

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	13
Preface	15
PART I. WRITING COLONIALITY	17
Chapter 1. Guamán Poma: Coevalness and the Space of Purity	19
I. Writing and Ethnic Identity	19
II. Separation and Autonomy	27
III. Learning Writing	31
IV. Setting up Separate Rule	42
V. The Future of Time	47
VI. The Space of Purity	54
VII. The Organization of Purity and the King's Advantage	58
VIII. The Impossibility of Coevalness	62
Chapter 2. Guamán Poma: Confession, Pastoral Power, and the Order of the Subject	67
I. The Order of (the) Subject	67
II. "Calles" and the Taxonomy of Confession	76
III. The Dialogic Order of the Subject	91
Chapter 3. Dancing and the Sacred in the Andes: From the Taqui-Oncoy to Rasu-Ñiti	95
Chapter 4. Memory and "Writing" in the Andes: From Cuzco to Valladolid and Back Again	117
Preamble	117
I. Timelines	118
II. Spaces of Entanglement	129

III. From Valladolid to Cuzco, or How to “Write” the Andean Past and Present	142
Chapter 5. Historiography on the Ground: the Toledo Circle and Guamán Poma	157
Preamble	157
Introduction	158
I. The Books of the Brave	167
II. On the Pleasure of Tyranny	170
III. Governmentality: Ordenanzas and Buen Gobierno	181
Conclusions	187
Chapter 6. Writing Subalternity: Guamán Poma and Garcilaso, Inca	193
Preamble	193
I. Writing Interdictions	198
II. Evocation in a New Mode	200
III. Writing Back in Reciprocity	202
Chapter 7. Garcilaso's Cuzco: Space and the Place of Knowledge	213
I. Humanism and Renaissance	213
II. Cuzco and Humanism	216
III. A Problem of Knowledge and Method	219
IV. Our Knowledge of Cuzco	220
V. The “Plan” of Cuzco	222
VI. Cuzco and the Problem of Knowledge	223
Chapter 8. Pedagogies Baroque	231
I. Sor Juana, Sigüenza y Góngora, and a Question of Method	231
II. The Jesuits and the Humanist Paedeia	241
III. Pedagogies Baroque	246
IV. Bending Pedagogies	255
Chapter 9. The Nation in Ruins: Archeology and the Rise of the Nation	259
I. The Riddles of Imagined Communities	259
II. Mapping the Nation	263
III. Imperialism, Nation and Archeology	267
IV. Andean Sites of Memory	270
V. Local Knowledges and Paradigm Shifts	275
VI. Mexico: A Case in Point	277
VII. The Emergence of an Arqueo-Space	279
VIII. Narrating the Nation’s Arqueo-Space	283
IX. The Ethnographic, Territorial Nation	289
X. Conclusions	291

Chapter 10. The Ruins of the Present: Cuzco Evoked	295
Preamble	295
 PART II. DEBATING POST-COLONIAL THEORY	 309
Chapter 1. Mimicry Revisited: Latin America, Postcolonial Theory, and the Location of Knowledge	311
I. Mappings of the Global	311
II. Errors and the Torrid Zone	315
III. Emancipatory Projects at Large	322
IV. Dussel and Mutual Recognition	330
V. Empires and the Pleats of Mimicry	333
 Chapter 2. Literacy, Conquest and Interpretation: Breaking New Ground on the Records of the Past	 345
Chapter 3. "Writing with his Thumb in the Air:" Coloniality, Past and Present	363
I. The Past as a Present Problem	365
II. Paradigm Shift	373
III. Globalization, the National Subject and Latin Americanism	378
IV. Conclusions	384
 Chapter 4. The Recognition of Convergence: Subaltern Studies in Perspective	 391
Chapter 5. Inter-rupting the Text of Latin American Literature: Problems of (Mis)Recognition	403
I. Entanglements	403
II. Inter-rupting Literature	408
III. Retreat of Writerly Culture	411
IV. Inter-ruption and Dilemmas	414
V. Deviating the Flow	418
 Chapter 6. Lima: A Blurred Centrality	427
I. Colonial Semiosis	428
II. Local Knowledge and the Effects of the Enlightenment	442
III. Independence	446
IV. The Twentieth Century	450
 Chapter 7. Posting Letters: Writing in the Andes and the Paradoxes of the Post-colonial Debate	 469
I. Coloniality at Large	469
II. Coloniality	471
III. Coloniality and the Battle Field	474
IV. Paradigms on Trial	476

V. Changing the Subject	479
VI. Education, (Non)Learning, and Ideology	481
VII. Religion	489
VIII. Literature on Trial	491
Conclusions	497
BIBLIOGRAPHY	501
CREDITS	527